I have a list of tables (tab1, tab2, tab3) and I want to create a new table from this list. How do I do it with a single statement? Eg. I want to do something like CREATE TABLE tab1_tab3 AS SELECT * FROM tab1, tab3; How do I define "tab1", "tab3" and "tab1_tab3" in my statement? A: You can't do that in a single query. If you have a list of tables, you need to loop over that list in an iterative statement. Something like: select * into mytable from table1 union all select * from table2 union all select * from table3; If you simply want all tables from a database, then just use select * into mytable from information_schema.tables; If you want a mix of the two, then you can do the select into the first one, then the next statement is a select from all of the other tables. select * into mytable from table1 select * from table2 union select * from table3 union select * from table4 etc. Fibromyalgia: a neurologic disorder? Fibromyalgia (FM) is a chronic pain disorder of unknown etiology. In contrast to chronic pain syndromes that are predominantly of central origin, FM is associated with muscle tenderness and, in many patients, stiffness. The primary symptoms of FM are generalized fatigue, diffuse musculoskeletal pain, headache, and depression

Localization with aspect in Java I have the following question about localization of my application in Java. The problem is a bit specific and I hope someone can help me. My application have 3 parts, 1 for user, and 1 for admin. My user part is a class called UserPanel and is used for basic input and output. The other two parts are quite like a cat and mouse game. My admin part access a database through a java EJB. When the admin part wants to add something in the database, it creates an object containing this data, and send it to the UserPanel. Question : how can I localize this part? How can I override the English for example if the admin part uses the Dutch language? I tried to use the localization package but it didn't seem to work. I also considered to localize only the user part, but it is not a solution, because the Admin part uses the JPA and when I try to execute a find the user isn't found. So the admin part should be able to check to find my user without checking the database. What is the best solution to localize my application in Java? Is there a tutorial for Java localization somewhere? Thanks for your time, Olivier PS : before someone tell me what is the importance of the name space for my classes, they are separated in 2 packages. A: Use JavabeanLocator. It is useful in your case. It will take care of translation of the fields if you configure the BeanLocator to use the I18nPropertySource. You can do this easily by configuring the bean locator to use the Locale of your main app and then assigning the desired locale to the I18nPropertySource of the bean locator.
